Women's History Month

at Newgate Prison in the center of London. Inside the prison, 190 women and 100 children were housed together—prostitutes, murderers, and professional thieves alongside innocent women and children who had merely fled abusive homes. None of the inmates were given bedding or clothing, with the result that many were living in nearly unbearable conditions.

Fry had been warned that the prison was dangerous to enter. Despite the danger, Fry was determined to enter the women's section of the prison.

As a crowd of shrieking women surged toward her, Fry held her own, calmly explaining that she was a mother who wanted to know how to help the prisoners and their children. To the astonishment of the guards, the inmates halted their furious attack and listened carefully to what Fry had to say.

Later Fry formed a volunteer organization of women dedicated to feeding, clothing, educating, and praying with the inmates and their children. Through her work she sparked a worldwide prison reform movement, something that might not have happened without the empowering presence of God. Fry knew that her work depended on God's guidance, remarking that "nothing short of the Holy Spirit can really help forward the cause of righteousness on earth."

Spread your cloak, grab a palm,
Let's all rejoice and sing a psalm.
Praise the Lord, call out with glee,
Your Saviour comes astride a donkey.
Cry blessing to you Saviour King,
Shout aloud, hosanna's ring.
Zechariah's word, today comes true,
'See your King now comes to you.'
He truly is, God's righteous Son,
Salvation's come for everyone.
So spread your cloak, grab a palm.
Let's all rejoice and sing a psalm.
